

City Weekly readers have long sought out our street boxes for what's inside: a weekly newspaper covering local news, arts and entertainment. Now, they have a new reason to look for our boxes: Public art.

City Weekly is seeking 6 local artists to turn once-nondescript black street boxes into beautiful works of art to be displayed throughout Salt Lake City. Artists will have from now until June 19 to complete the project. The 6 art-tastic street boxes will be on display during the 2015 Utah Arts Festival. The permanent location of their post-festival home will be revealed then.

---

What we need:

A short paragraph about you or the artistic team creating the box.

A minimum of 3 picture examples of your art. You will also be required to pick up and drop off your box to City Weekly (248 S. Main Street).

Q & A for participating Artists:

Restrictions: The news rack must have City Weekly somewhere on it, and it must be able to serve its primary function of holding papers. You can not obstruct the window. Boxes will serve as street art in neighborhoods where City Weekly distributes; keep in mind the audience that will be seeing your box, if you don't want to show it to your mom then we probably don't want to put it on the streets, other than that, the box is a blank canvas.

How long will I have to work on the news rack?

Racks are available now to be picked up and must be complete by Friday, June 19 so that they may be placed on display at the Utah Arts Festival. Deadline is very important. Chosen artists must be available for a web series documenting the creation of the 6 boxes and short introductions on the artists, further instructions will be given once the 6 artists have been selected.

What will happen once I return the completed news rack to you?

We need to take photos of your completed work, so we can promote it in the newspaper — one of the many reasons why the deadline is important. We will need your rack back at our office when it's completed (City Weekly headquarters – 248 South Main Salt Lake City). We exhibit your Art Rack all 4 days of the Utah Arts Festival. Shortly after that showing, we'll put your stand on the street for all of the general public to admire. Cityweekly.net/outofthebox will also have information on the artist and finished news stands online to view.

Who keeps the news racks when they're finished?

The news racks remain the property of City Weekly. For your convenience, we've even provided a contract saying that you know that. We cannot release the rack to you without receiving the signed release from you.

We're excited about this project and to be able to partner with the Utah Arts Festival in this unique way. Combining City Weekly's alternative voice with Salt Lake's vibrant artists to create a lasting impact on our community.

For further questions are to apply for an artist spot please email jbriggs@cityweekly.net with the above requirements.